Headline:
Cloudy for many in west Friday. Brighter in east.

Today:
Cloudy for many to start, particularly in the west with some rain here mainly for hills. This breaking by day though remaining murky for many in the far southwest. Warm in east, particularly in sunshine.

Tonight:
Clear spells for many, particularly in east and south. A few fog patches parts of Wales and southern England. Some showers in far north where windy. Cooler than previous nights.

Saturday:
Fine and dry for most with good sunny spells. Warm or very warm, particularly in the southeast. Thicker cloud arriving into Northern Ireland and western Scotland, perhaps with rain later.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Fine, dry and very warm/hot for many. Cloudier at times for parts of Scotland and Northern Ireland with showery rain. Unsettled by Wednesday with a risk of thunderstorms.
